Places Visited

Stourbridge – Red Cone Glass House Museum

The Red House Glass Cone lies in the heart of the Stourbridge glassmaking industry and is next to the Stourbridge Canal. Built at the end of the 18th Century the Cone was used for the manufacture of glass until 1936 and is now one of only four cones left in the United Kingdom. Reaching 100 feet into the sky, the Cone enclosed a furnace around which men made glass for 140 years and was originally built for the purpose of making window glass.

Leather Museum

Walsall Leather Museum was opened in 1988 in a Victorian factory building. It tells the story of the leather trade in Walsall, charting the town's rise from a small market town into an international saddle-making centre. Walsall Leather Museum celebrates the great achievements of local leather craftsmen and women and tells the story of the Walsall leather trade and the local people who have been making some of the world's finest saddles and leather goods for over two hundred years. The museum displays feature splendid examples of historic craftsmanship and exciting contemporary designs.

Stourbridge Glass Museum

This new museum at the heart of Stourbridge's Glass Quarter, opened to the public for the first time in April 2022. The museum will be housed in the Grade II listed former Stuart Crystal Glassworks, which has been creatively and imaginatively adapted for the purpose. Combining both permanent and temporary exhibition galleries and a hot glass making studio with a hands-on activities space for visitors. For over 400 years, state of the art glass in every fashionable style has been made in the Stourbridge area, and Stourbridge glass is collected and admired world-wide. The Stourbridge Glass Collection housed at the museum is one of the finest world-wide holdings of British and international 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th century glass.

Black Country Living Museum

An immersive experience from start to finish, the Black Country Living Museum is an award-winning open-air museum that tells the story of one of the very first industrialised landscapes in Britain. Set across 26 acres, you'll explore over forty carefully reconstructed shops, houses and industrial areas that represent the Black Country's story. You'll learn how steam power, human ingenuity and an increasingly interconnected world transformed this region into a manufacturing powerhouse. The Black Country is often seen of a collection of 20 or so towns falling within the four Metropolitan Boroughs of Dudley, Sandwell, Walsall and Wolverhampton. While no one quite agrees on the exact boundaries of the region, one thing is known for certain: Black Country folk changed the world. They built world's first successful steam engine; put the first steam train (the Stourbridge Lion) on US soil; fuelled the introduction of the first minimum wage; produced the anchor for the Titanic; practically built the Crystal Palace and so much more. From the early 20th century onwards, the Black Country region became one of the most industrialised parts of the UK with coal mines, iron foundries, glass factories, brick works and more dominating the landscape.
